The End of the Matter

Ecclesiastes: 12:9-14

10 April 2022

Mr Quek Tze-Ming/Ps Vernon Quek

Intro

The Narrator's Assessment of the Preacher's Journey (v8-12)

- Qoheleth - one who speaks to the assembly
- Teaching, Searching, Writing

The End of the Matter (v13&14)

What matter? Qoheleth's Quest

- Fear God and Keep His Commandments
 - Fearing God in Ecclesiastes: 3:14; 5:7; 7:18; 8:12&13
- Why? For God will judge every deed

Conclusion:

Questions for Reflection and Discussion

1. Which of the Preacher's words of truth have struck you from the book of Ecclesiastes this year?
2. What does Fearing God and keeping His commandments mean to you now? Are you convinced that this really is the end of the matter?
3. How does God's final judgement shape your living 'under the sun'? How does it rightly help you Fear God?
4. What exactly is v12 warning us against? What does this mean you need to watch out for in your life?

Prayer Points

Our Church

Palm Sunday - As we ponder Jesus' entrance into Jerusalem this Palm Sunday, the picture we get is not a triumphant military king on a war horse but a humble servant king, on a donkey. Let us remember that it was love that drove Jesus to give his life on the cross for us. What is the Lord asking of you today? May this life we live be FOR our Lord, in courageous service to Him. May we be willing to sacrifice our all for Him just as he was willing to do so for us.

Bishan Home - With the ease in measures, in-person activities were originally planned for this Sunday. Unfortunately a few positive cases were found on Wednesday and they now have to control visitors and volunteers again. Do keep the residents and staff in prayer that the situation will be under control and they will still hope in God during this challenging season of isolation and reduced interaction.

Our People

Darrell Tan – Praise God for Darrell's commissioning as Zion Bishan's missionary this morning. It is a special moment for him and his family, a culmination of many years of prayer and preparation. Pray for Darrell to draw wisdom and courage from the Lord as he engages in the task of missions and mobilisation.

Our World

India - Two partners in the North are seeking prayer for the smooth completion of their yearly financial audits at this time. For another partner in the north, please pray for 6 families who have had to leave their communities because of their faith. May the Lord continue to encourage them in the midst of this. Praise God that they are strong in their faith. A partner that runs a day care centre for children in the northeast has requested prayers for a bigger venue as their work have expanded and their current place has become congested. May they be able to find a suitable one.

Indonesia - The same partner that has seen a small group turning to Christ from the blind community here requests for prayer for their ministry to the deaf and mute community. There was not much response to the gospel, hence, their field workers started praying earnestly in recent months for this community. Praise God for one girl who was open to study the word and who received the good news with gladness. Pray that there will be a movement for the gospel among the deaf and mute communities here in Indonesia.

THANKS FOR YOUR RESPONSE!

NOT MY WILL BUT YOURS

Just 2 years ago, I never expected life to turn out this way. I thought I would be working in the marketplace till 67. An unexpected turn of events led to my “early” retirement one year back. Then, a response to help Emmanuel BPC once a month became a full-time endeavour. It wasn’t the journey I had envisaged nor prayed for.

As Good Friday approaches, I thought of what Elizabeth Elliot shared:

“The struggle Jesus had in the Garden of Gethsemane showed me this.

A conflict was taking place — not to annihilate his own will but to accept the will of the Father, which was other than his. It did not end with Jesus saying, “My will is now yours” but with, “Not my will, but yours be done.” The act of praying, far from divesting us of human desires, enables us to lay them before God as very real and pressing and say to him, “Not mine, Lord. Yours.” If we had gotten rid of them, there would be nothing to lay down. There is something terribly down-to-earth about this.”

Jesus prayed at Gethsemane: “Father, if you are willing, remove this cup from me. Nevertheless, not my will, but yours, be done.” (Luke 22:42) That was a deeply agonising moment even though He knew all along that was the Father’s plan for Him.

Each of us has our own plans and we can make known our plans to God. But that may not be what God wants. God may sometimes deny us what we want in order to give us something far better. We can be assured that the will of a good God is invariably better. As I prayed and struggled about it, I felt a growing peace and clarity over time though I tread this with much fear and trembling. I came to a point where I could say as Jesus did, “Nevertheless, not my will but yours be done.”

For me, I see this setting aside of my own “plans” to follow God’s leading in this season of my life as the simple obedience of one who is undeserving yet saved by grace. Not everyone is called to do what I’m doing now. But every Christian who calls Jesus Lord must obey what God says (Luke 6:46).

Would we be willing to obey the clear commands contained in God’s Word and for whatever God specifically calls us to?

ECCLESIASTES REFLECTIONS

We are reaching the end of our Ecclesiastes sermon series, and some have already contributed their reflections on the book. With their permission, some of these are shared below.

I found Ecclesiastes refreshing, very meaningful and applicable. A lot of deep searching but really rejoicing each session in the hope and identity I have in Christ. Each sermon helped refine my purpose and reason, though to be honest some sermons were heavy where we encountered why suffering, pain happens to good people too.

Personally, the series strengthened my identity and purpose and reason why we can live each day renewed and run the race well. Pressing on toward the Goal, the high calling as a child of Christ, and ambassador for Him, to share His story of Hope, Redemption, and Restoration; The good news being relevant to every square inch of life.

Just as was shared at the 2021 Watchnight service, on running the Race of Life well, I also felt Ecclesiastes was very timely for the events that are unfolding, each sermon was so timely for every week current events and the situations I went through. Really thankful for each sermon in this series. God Bless, Shalom.

John Chua

The world is a very broken place and life often seems illogical/meaningless; And in fact, practicing good things like wisdom can cost one dearly. Many things happen for which there is no explanation, and oftentimes all our toiling seems useless. Yet, there is still hope and reason to persevere, because the God of all wisdom has ordained the times and seasons. As mere humans, we are to fear God and keep in step with Him, enjoy the present and be in community, practice what prudence we can and ultimately, know that a day will come when God will judge all our deeds, and put things right. And so we persevere in light of the knowledge that while we may not find meaning, God does, and one day we will understand.

Chang En Qi

The book touched base with reality and how most people feel about it. Hence, it opens up the willingness to look at reality from God's point of view. The quiet mentions of the words of Christ with reference to Ecclesiastes brings new perspective and understanding to what Christ said. I have personally grown in awe of the words of Christ through Ecclesiastes, especially the richness and essence of what HE is saying.

Having my Action Group cover Genesis at the same time had also helped me understand Ecclesiastes even more, especially on the creation of Work and the great constant evil of man.

I think Ecclesiastes is a very excellent book to have a conversation with non-Christians and to follow up with them. If only we have concise materials, on it and that is able to bring out the 'frustrations' in the book.

Reggie Ng

The Ecclesiastes series has prompted me to examine my life in current pursuit of career, wealth accumulation and relationships in the light of what the writer said: "Vanity of vanities" or meaninglessness when God is not in the picture. This is particularly poignant after living two restrictive years under pandemic. I felt various degrees of frustration with the situation: the isolation among people or a lostness of direction due to the prolonged enforcement of social distancing; the lost of connectivity between people and more virtual meeting, etc. I thought the timing to preach on Ecclesiastes is God-guided because it challenged me to re-think the purpose of life, evaluate my spiritual life's directions and to recalibrate my walk to "fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

Ben Quek

The world is broken and hurtling inexorably towards death. Life under the sun unpredictable, intensely frustrating. But that lack of control and certainty of death is designed to drive us toward the One who is Sovereign and the Giver of Life.

Knowing our Creator and Redeemer is our only hope of living with any meaning or purpose.

Everyone, at every stage of life, needs urgently to remember our Creator who entered His Creation to redeem us, and to live out our days mindful that we are ever in His Presence, and accountable to Him — not just for how we spend our time and resources in our lifetime, but ultimately for our attitude and response to Jesus — Creator, Saviour, returning Judge and King.
